TILE TRAVELOGUE

REVITALIZING RUSSIA

Russian architecture has long been known for its distinctive style. We take a brief look at what makes Russian architecture unique with its mix tradition and modern approach to it.

Russia is a transcontinental country spanning Eastern Europe and Northern Asia. It covers over 17,125,191 square kilometres (6,612,073 sq mi), stretching more than one-eighth of the Earth's inhabited land area, with eleven time zones, and bordering 16 sovereign nations. Moscow is the country's capital and largest city, while Saint Petersburg is the second-largest city. Russia is the largest country in the world, the ninth-most populous country, as well as the most populous country in Europe. The country is one of the world's most sparsely populated and urbanised.

Russian architecture follows a tradition whose roots lie in early Russian wooden architecture. From the Rus' era, the Byzantine Empire influenced the architecture and culture of Russia. In other phases of Russian history, the architecture developed independently and was characterized by national and local features.
